Mt. Zion United Methodist Church
Swanton
Private

late 19th century

Mount Zion United Methodist Church is a frame, one story, gable-roofed building on a cement block foundation. Its basic configuration is a three bay rectangular plan with a vestibule at its southwest endwall and a shed addition on the northwest side of the vestibule. The windows lighting the main section of the church are sash lancets with blue/white/violet marbled glass panes. The northeast and southwest elevations are lit by small diamond-shaped windows. The vestibule has a double door entrance and is topped by a square, pyramidal-roofed bellfry. The bellfry is decorated with a star on each face of the base and has double arched openings through which the bell is visible. A slight dip in the roofline and rise in the foundation at the northeast end indicate that the rear of the building has been extended a few feet.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

Mount Zion United Methodist Church is located on the north side of Mount Zion Road approximately 2.5 miles southeast of Maryland Route 135. The facade of the building faces the road, pointing southwest.

The church is a frame, one story, gable-roofed building on a cement block foundation. Its basic configuration is a three bay rectangular plan with a vestibule at its southwest endwall and a shed addition on the northwest side of the vestibule.

The windows lighting the main section of the church are sash lancets with blue/white/violet marbled glass panes. The northeast and southwest elevations are lit by small diamond-shaped windows.

The vestibule has a double door entrance and is topped by a square, pyramidal-roofed bellfry. The bellfry is decorated with a star on each face of the base and has double arched openings through which the bell is visible.

A slight dip in the roofline and rise in the foundation at the northeast end indicate that the rear of the building has been extended a few feet. Other alterations include asbestos shingles on the exterior walls asphalt shingles on the roof, a new exterior brick flue on the southeast elevation, and steel doors with plastic moldings.

The cemetery is situated southeast of the church on the north and south sides of Mount Zion Road.
